

Commentary: Criser explains university system's 'performance...

Florida's State University System has never struggled with attracting students, even as the number of schools grows.

That ability to attract students, both in- and out-of-state, has worked well with the traditional funding model of allocating based on how many full-time equivalent students are enrolled at the beginning of the semester.

But while that model provides incentives for colleges to enroll st

Q: How big of a factor should performance be going forward in what funding universities get?

A: The simple answer is that performance

